Angela Carr's artistic journey began in her childhood, where she found solace in drawing and painting. As she grew older, she pursued formal training in art, earning a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree from the University of California, Berkeley.

After graduating, Angela experimented with various artistic styles and mediums before discovering her passion for mixed media. She was drawn to the versatility of combining different materials, allowing her to explore a wide range of textures, forms, and colors.

Techniques and Materials

Angela's mixed media artworks incorporate a diverse array of materials, including acrylics, oil pastels, collage, and found objects. She often begins by creating abstract shapes and forms, which she then layers with representational elements.

The Here In There Exhibition

In 2023, Angela Carr presented a solo exhibition titled "Here In There" at the prestigious Gagosian Gallery in London. The exhibition showcased a collection of her recent works, including large-scale mixed media pieces and intimate collages.

The title of the exhibition reflects the essence of Angela's art, which explores the interplay between the realms of abstraction and representation, the inner and outer worlds.
